Things You Invest in.

The Boring Company

Its projects, like the Loop and Hyperloop, aim to enable high-speed transportation using electric vehicles. The company develops cost-effective tunneling technology for faster and more affordable construction. Beyond transportation, it explores underground utilities and has even sold branded merchandise to fund operations.

NeuraLink

Neuralink, founded by Elon Musk in 2016, develops brain-computer interfaces (BCIs) to connect the human brain with technology. Its implantable brain chips aim to treat neurological disorders like paralysis and Alzheimer's. The company also explores direct brain-to-machine communication, enabling mind-controlled devices and AI integration. Neuralink has tested its technology on animals and plans future human trials.

Starlink

Starlink, developed by SpaceX, is a satellite internet service providing high-speed, low-latency connectivity worldwide. Using a vast network of low Earth orbit (LEO) satellites, it ensures better coverage, especially in remote areas. Unlike traditional satellite internet, its large satellite constellation enables faster speeds and lower latency. Starlink continues expanding, benefiting rural communities, aviation, maritime industries, and emergency response teams.

SpaceX

SpaceX, founded by Elon Musk in 2002, is an aerospace company focused on reducing space travel costs and enabling Mars colonization. It develops reusable rockets like Falcon 9 and Starship, revolutionizing space exploration. SpaceX also provides satellite launches, cargo missions to the ISS, and human spaceflight. Its Starship project aims to make interplanetary travel a reality.

Tesla

Tesla, Inc. is an American company specializing in electric vehicles and clean energy solutions. Founded in 2003, it produces EVs like the Model S, Model 3, Model X, and Model Y.
